

POLITICS

Former US Defense Secretary Mattis Suggests Trump Should Face Exile For Capitol Hill Chaos

Says Trump should be “left a man without a country.”

Published 15 hours ago on 7 January, 2021

Paul Joseph Watson

Steven Ferdman via Getty

Former US Defense Secretary Jim Mattis has suggested that President Trump should face exile in response to some of his supporters storming the Capitol building yesterday.

Trump sought to de-escalate the situation by telling protesters to go home during the chaos, but Twitter subsequently deleted his tweets and locked him out of his account.

56
Comments

While many are now pushing for Trump to be removed as President under the 25th amendment, Mattis suggested he should be stripped of his citizenship entirely.

The Spectator Index
@spectatorindex

JUST IN: Former US Defense Secretary Mattis says the country will overcome this 'stain' and Donald Trump will be left as a 'man without a country'

6:49 PM · Jan 6, 2021 (i)

 3.8K
  856 people are Tweeting about this

“Today’s violent assault on our Capitol, an effort to subjugate American democracy by mob rule, was fomented by Mr. Trump,” said Mattis.

“Our Constitution and our Republic will overcome this stain and We the People come together again in our never-ending effort to form a more perfect Union, with Mr. Trump will deservedly be left a man without a country,” he added.

Numerous Twitter users also called for Trump to be exiled, with some suggesting he should go to Saudi Arabia.

SUBSCRIBE on YouTube:

Paul Joseph Watson

YouTube 1M

Follow on Twitter:

Follow @PrisonPlanet

ALERT!